On a moonless night
a child was born in a kingdom
Of basketball gods
In a county they called the summit
north of the capital
a rubber city
Where the Akronites run it
This child earned Learned
the labors of his love
From watching his neighbors
Rise above hard work
At the local mills
Watching the sweat of their brow Seeing his comrades growing up Trying to conquer the hill
A steep field of wheat worn from cleats and cold pounding the bottom of their soles Against Against tough Ohio winters and unconditional vertigo
But he rose
from the dusk
of Elizabeth Park
And her projects
till the arrival of the dawn rose from a high school Phenom to the pros never forgetting how the sun set on Lake Erie
How the rough waters of the spotlight
can ravage
Flow savagely along
